This eminently drinkable Rully begins with ripe apples, hawthorn flowers and hazelnut aromas. The texture is substantial yet not at all heavy. It is a rich wine that retains admirable balance, and the extract carries it to a silky, subtle finish. The grapes come from a mid-slope parcel of 0.77 ha behind and above the village in a vineyard stretching the site's entire length. This wine will drink well on release and should hold for five years or more.

Santenay Les Hâtes is in a hollow that turns just slightly to the west, but it is between two broad swaths of premier crus – a very good address. Belleville owns just over three-quarters of a hectare here. The grapes are destemmed and fermented with a very gentle extraction before ageing in cask (35% new), for 16 months. The result is a wine with a lighter, plummy fruit aroma but also with less alcohol; the effect is more ethereal on the palate, the texture is more supple, and yet the length is impressive.
